

Portland FolkMusic Society presents the 26th annual

SINGTIME FROLICS

March 26-28, 2010

Join us for a weekend of singing and homemade music at beautiful, woodsy Camp Adams near Molalla, Ore., 45 minutes south of Portland.

Singtime Frolics is a weekend camp for singers and musicians of all ages and abilities featuring song circles, formal and informal workshops, and singing & jamming here, there, and everywhere, and late into the night.

Guest artists are Steve Einhorn and Kate Power. They will present two popular workshops:

- Ukalaliens: A Beginner's Guide to Ukulele Fun (they have ukes to lend)
- Songwriting: The Musical Theatre of Everyday Life.

Other workshops and song circles typically include musical styles, songwriters or instruments of interest, topical songs, performing and songs in other languages. If you want to develop a workshop or lead a song circle, let us know, or just write it into the schedule when you get to camp.

Anyone can perform at the Saturday night concert. Work up your best piece, organize a band, write a new song to unveil. The most supportive audience you'll ever stand before.

Accommodations include heated dorm rooms with bunk beds and hot showers; the fare is good quality camp food.

Early registration postmarked by February 19: adults $80; children under 12: $50.

Registration after February 19: adults $90, children $60.

Registrations must be postmarked by March 12.

For more information contact Hal Day at hpday@earthlink.net or call 503-626-1537.

Download registration forms from portlandfolkmusic.org.